PURIM: A REENACTMENT OF SINAI

In celebration of the incredible miracle that took place in the Purim story, Mordechai and Esther formulated the holiday that commemorates our national salvation:

> על פי הוראותיו של אדוארד קלא afs הוראותיו של אדוארד קלא afs הוראותיו של אדוארד קלא afs

That is why village Jews, who live in unwalled towns, observe the fourteenth day of the month of Adar and make it a day of merrymaking and feasting, and as a holiday and an occasion for sending gifts to one another.

Esther 9:19

One of the most defining features of this holiday is the mitzvah of mishloach manos — sending gifts to one another. There is a well-known debate between the Manos Halevi (commentary to 9:19) and the Terumas Hadeshen (111) regarding the nature of this mitzvah. Is the purpose to generate a broader sense of unity among the Jewish people, or is it more particular to the Purim experience — a mandate of interpersonal responsibility to ensure that the entire community has the requisite resources to enjoy the Purim feast?

Rav Yitzchak Hunter, in his work Pachad Yitzchak (31), notes the unique nature of this mitzvah on Purim. Generally, the mandate for Jewish unity finds expression in interactions that take place between individuals. Purim is unique in that this ambition is ritualized into a formal halachic requirement, infusing the chag with an energized social dimension of communal connectivity. Rav Hutner wonders why this approach to unity is found specifically in the celebration of Purim, in contrast to the many other chagim that commemorate national salvation.

The Pachad Yitzchak explains that Purim celebrates not only the salvation of the Jewish people, but the religious revival that it inspired.

> והם יצאו בתחתית ההר אמר רב אבדמי בר חמא בר חסא מלמד שכפה הקדוש ברוך הוא עליהם את ההר כגיגית ואמר להם אם אתם מקבלים התורה טוב אם לאו שם תחאב קבורתכם אמר רב אחא בר יעקב מכאן מדרישא רבה לאøyיתא אמר רבא אף על פי כן הדור קבלוה בימי אחשוresh דכתיב קימו והשתה קיבלו היהודים קיימו מה שקיבלו בו.

Rav Hutner wonders why this approach to unity is found specifically in the celebration of Purim, in contrast to the many other chagim that commemorate national salvation. The Pachad Yitzchak explains that Purim celebrates not only the salvation of the Jewish people, but the religious revival that it inspired.

> ויתיצבו בתחתית ההר אמר רב אבדמי בר חמא בר חסא מלמד שכפה הקדוש ברוך הוא עליהם את ההר כגיגית ואמר להם אם אתם מקבלים התורה טוב אם לאו שם תחאב קבורתכם אמר רב אחא בר יעקב מכאן מדרישא רבה לאøyיתא אמר רבא אף על פי כן הדור קבלוה בימי אחשוresh דכתיב קימו והשתה קיבלו היהודים קיימו מה שקיבלו בו.

Shabbos 88a

The existential threat to the Jewish people was ultimately rooted in the deterioration of their loyalty to Torah observance, as depicted by their participation in Achashveirosh’s party at the outset of the Megillah. The salvation of Am Yisroel was greeted by a renewed commitment to the values and ideals of our Torah and a re-creation of the Sinai experience — the original moment of our embracing G-d’s word. Rav Hutner explains that one of the defining features of the original kabalas Hatorah was the unity of the Jewish people:

> And there Israel encamped [in front of Mount Sinai] — as one man and with one heart.

Rashi, Shemos 19:2

Purim, as a reenacting of the commitment of kabalas Hatorah, also necessitates this dimension of unity. The mitzvah of mishloach manos is intended to serve as the ke’ish echad b’leiv echad (as one man and with one heart) moment of the Purim experience. Accepting the Torah, in both generations, required a platform of unity.

We are proud to present a special edition of the Benjamin and Rose Berger Torah To Go, featuring divrei Torah from faculty and administration members of YU’s many partner schools. It is such a beautiful expression of unity for us to bring together writers and teachers of Torah from many different types of institutions, elevating the broader kabalas Hatorah of Purim for our community.